

GI Brides: The Wartime Girls Who Crossed the Atlantic for Love

Wednesday, September 10, 6:30 pm
Main Library, Meeting Room 2AB

In “GI Brides: The Wartime Girls Who Crossed the Atlantic for Love,” Nuala Calvi tells the story of four British women who married US servicemen and moved to America. One of these women was the author’s grandmother who moved from the southern states to Akron when her American husband took a job with Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company. A bestseller in England, the book is currently being published in the United States. Nuala returns to Akron and the Akron-Summit County Public Library where she researched some of her grandparents’ history.

The Akron-Summit County Public Library will host an author talk at 6:30 pm on Wednesday, September 10 about her grandmother’s story and those of other GI brides who travelled to America during and after World War II. The talk will be held at Main Library in meeting rooms A&B.
